TO THE MEMORY OF PERCY ALVIN MARTIN

Professor Percy Alvin Martin possessed a rare combination of virtues, and offered an example which we might well follow. His love of Latin America was sincere and spontaneous. It was combined with study and knowledge of the Old World, and it sought to harmonize the Old and the New, without stirring up animosities. His knowledge of Latin America was not confined to a single discipline; trained originally in Romanic languages, he knew the languages, the literatures, and the cultures of the countries to the south of us, as well as their political and diplomatic history. Although he worked untiringly in his paper-cluttered study, he knew that life is not learned from books, and he sought direct contact with the living experience of the countries to which he was devoted. He appreciated the pleasant life, but he was prepared for all the hardships of travel. He knew that the pattern of history reveals itself in movements, but that movements consist of a number of individuals. He admired the dignity of the long sweep of history, but he could sense the epic quality even of the humdrum life of the peaceful period between two wars. There was something ecumenical in his vision of that world, especially of that part of it known commonly as Latin America. Thus he came to compile Who's Who in Latin America. Only one who is trying to carry on his work can realize the toil and the annoyances which he endured in producing two editions of a book which has served us well and which we have tended to take for granted.

PREFACE TO PART I

Who's Who in Latin America represented originally the culmination of Professor Percy Alvin Martin's attempts to understand the present-day developments of society in those countries which are commonly grouped together under the appellation "Latin America."

A few years ago, the present editor would never have dreamed that he would one day undertake to continue and develop this work. His interest lay primarily in the history of international cultural relations in the "Latin" world during the modern era. Incidentally, to avoid repetitious excuses and explanations, the editor will henceforth use the word "Latin" without qualifications or comment. The genius of the present age seems to lean heavily toward the documented and at times bewildered study of the world today, with all its greatness and misery. Thus the editor came to find himself thinking more and more of the mechanics of current society in Latin countries. A cloud is passing over most of the Latin nations of Europe, while the sun still shines brightly on those countries which have not been caught in the vortex of the recent crisis. In search of positive achievements, during this eclipse of civilization, the editor looked to Latin America. There, he was confronted with a phenomenon which has impressed him in his study of Spain: the motive forces are not theories, nor parties, nor economic groups, nor ideological societies—although all of these have their place—but men, individuals who for one reason or another form a social nucleus.

The editor was thus becoming keenly interested in Latin Americans as individuals, when Latin American studies suffered an unexpected loss. The death of Professor Martin in 1941 was in part the result of overwork, and, in assessing the factors involved, the toil and tribulation of producing two editions, one in 1935 and the other in 1940, of Who's Who in Latin America must not be forgotten. The present editor then inherited a task which was at the same time enticing and forbidding. The work would certainly be stimulating and would provide an unexcelled opportunity to study the ins and outs of Latin-American life. At the same time, experience has confirmed the editor's premonition that the task would be a constant source of irritation. Nothing seems to reveal human foibles more than a study of great men. It would be indiscreet and prolix to enumerate the constant succession of problems with which all sorts and conditions of men, including, it must be said, some of the less co-operative biographees, have regaled the editor.

Moreover, the task in itself was no light undertaking. The first two editions, prepared by Professor Martin, contained approximately 1,000 and 1,500 biographies respectively. The present edition aims at a total of 8,000. It is, indeed, a new work, and the organization of the project has been completely revised. The selection of biographees is the result of careful study. To ensure that all phases of achievement are duly represented, the selection is based on the following categories:

- | | | |
|--|--|--|
| 1. Agriculturalists and landowners | credited foreign diplomats | 19. Miscellaneous |
| 2. Air Force | 11. Doctors of medicine and dentists | 20. Motion pictures |
| 3. Architects | 12. Educators | 21. Musicians (composers and performers) |
| 4. Army | 13. Engineers | 22. Navy |
| 5. Artists (painters, sculptors, etc.) | 14. Foreign colonies: (a) Anglo-American, (b) others | 23. Newspapermen |
| 6. Authors | 15. Government: (a) national, (b) regional | 24. Photographers |
| 7. Bankers and economists | 16. Industry | 25. Public men |
| 8. Clergy: (a) Catholic, (b) Protestant | 17. Labor unions | 26. Publishers (other than newspapers) |
| 9. Commerce | 18. Lawyers | 27. Radio |
| 10. Diplomatic Corps: (a) national, (b) accredited | | 28. Scientists and scholars |
| | | 29. Theater |
| | | 30. Women |

For convenience, this work is now arranged on a regional basis, and will be published in seven parts, as follows:

- I. Mexico
- II. Central America and Panama
- III. Colombia, Ecuador, and Venezuela
- IV. Bolivia, Chile, and Peru
- V. Argentina, Paraguay, and Uruguay
- VI. Brazil
- VII. Cuba, Dominican Republic, and Haiti

This arrangement has a double advantage. Some users of the work will be interested only in one of these regions. Moreover, the biographies have been condensed into a relatively small space, so that each part forms a slender book which should be convenient now that so much travel in Latin America is done by plane. A general index will be issued when the series is complete.

Like most university projects, this work is essentially a one-man job, and the editor has the ultimate responsibility for everything. It may be said that the outsider will have no idea of the amount of preparation which such a publication presupposes; we have, for example, at Stanford, biographical files about the activities of Latin Americans which, to our knowledge, are unequaled. The editor is fully aware of the shortcomings of this survey, and he would sincerely appreciate comments and criticisms from the users of the book. Any necessary rectifications will be incorporated in the next edition.

This project could not have matured without the constant encouragement and support of the editor's Stanford colleagues. Without question, the first mention in this regard should go to the chairman of the Stanford University Advisory Committee, Maxwell H. Savelle. His assistance has taken the most varied forms, and never has it failed. Sometimes it consisted of discussing the project with the occupants of heavily carpeted offices. At other times, the chairman gladly took off his coat and helped the editor to crate books and printed material. Sometimes the chairman consoled a rather despondent editor; sometimes he undertook important liaison missions. The other members of the committee—Paul H. Davis, Eliot G. Mears, Graham Stuart, Nathan van Patten, and C. Langdon White—have never failed with their counsel. Special mention should be made of Paul R. Hanna, at the time co-ordinator of university services, who helped the project successfully through its difficult early stages. The officers of the Stanford University Press—Will A. Friend, William Hawley Davis, Stanley M. Croonquist, and more recently the new director, Donald Bean—have offered an example of co-operation and teamwork for which the editor is deeply grateful. Much of the difficult editorial work of the project has been done by the editor's wife, who has generously sacrificed a great amount of time to carry through a project which was fighting all the difficulties created by wartime conditions.

In the preparation of this work, the editor undertook a year's tour of Latin America during which he visited all the twenty republics and laid the foundations for the preparation of this work. Everywhere he found willing helpers. In Mexico, he naturally looked to Rafael Heliodoro Valle, who is Honorary Curator of the Mexican Collection of Stanford's Hoover Library. Latin America's distinguished bibliophile proved to be a source of strength for the project. Sometimes he was giving philosophical advice to the editor about the nature of Mexican society. At other times he was assiduously hunting a recalcitrant address; in Mexico, it can be a major piece of research simply to find the address of a distinguished person. Part I would never have materialized without the help of Professor Valle. A great many others gave additional advice and counsel; they can be sure that their help has not been forgotten. The following names come to mind immediately: Enrique Aguirre, Pablo Alexanderson, Armando Arteaga y Santoyo, José de Benito, Jean Bernier, Miguel E. Bustamante, Alejandro Carrillo, María Teresa Chávez, Manuel Cirerol, Andrés Cisneros Chávez, Juan Comas Camps, Carlos Contreras, José Cornejo Franco, Daniel Cosío Villegas, Charles Day, Roberto Ezquerro Peraza, Justino Fernández, Thomas P. Gale, Manuel González Montesinos, A. Guerrero, Morris Hughes, H. O. Johnson, Francisco J. Macín, Manuel Magaña, Ignacio Marquina, John Masteller, Gabriel Méndez Plancarte, Jorge Mendoza Carrasco, Eduardo de Ontañón, Alejandro Quijano, Federico Ramos, Samuel Ramos, Agustín Rodríguez, Jr., Adolfo Salazar, Carlos Sánchez Mejorada, Manuel Sandoval Vallarta, Abby Schoen, E. W. Sours, Montague S. Turner, Francisco Villagrán, and J. R. Woodul. This by no means exhausts the list.

Perhaps the supreme virtue of this work is that it is, for all concerned, a labor of love. It has been carried through in a strictly academic spirit, from which no kind of pressure could make it deviate. With Who's Who in America, this work belongs to the small group of publications of this kind which are not merely commercial enterprises. It was for this reason that Stanford University and the A. N. Marquis Company, publishers of Who's Who in America, joined forces to sponsor the third edition. By this agreement, the Marquis Company undertakes to share any eventual deficit, whereas no profits may accrue to it.

The interest of the Marquis Company in this project has been to encourage a responsible and competent organization to undertake for Latin America a task similar to the one it carries out in the United States. The editor of Who's Who in America, Mr. Wheeler Sammons, has been an unfailing source of help and advice.

It is the editor's hope that this publication will have a wide circulation in all English-speaking countries. It is his personal belief that a profound understanding between the United States, England, and Latin America is a fundamental factor in maintaining peace in the Atlantic area. He wishes moreover to spread in the English-speaking countries a wider knowledge of the leading figures of Latin America and of the all but unknown achievements of these countries. It is for this reason that this publication is edited in English. The critic, aware of the spirit which animates this enterprise, as well as the difficulties in its execution, will, we hope, view it kindly.

GOITIA, Francisco, artist; b. Zacatecas, Zac., 1884; ed. Acad. de Bellas Artes, Mexico City; traveled in Europe, 1904-12; studied under Francisco Gali in Spain. Served in Mexican revolutionary army under Gen. Angeles, 1912-18; undertook at the instance of Dr. Manuel Gamio an archaeological reconnaissance in the valley of San Juan Telotihuacán, where he secured material and inspiration for his painting. From this epoch, date a great quantity of studies, notes, sketches (carbons, pastels, water colors) which eventually found their way into private collections and into the reception room of the Undersecretary of Public Education. At various times Sr. Goitia has held expositions, notably in Barcelona, Spain, and in Washington, D.C. (1924). The best collection of his works is in the building of the Ministry of Education in Mexico City. In recent years he has remained somewhat aloof from artistic and official circles and has spent much time teaching drawing to the children in the schools of Xochimilco, the village of floating gardens adjacent to Mexico City. Address: Morelos 24, Xochimilco, Mexico, D.F.
